These Are the Times That Try Men's Schedules

In today's busy world, every day demands choices. Opportunities for work, volunteering, entertainment, socializing, worship, and hobbies abound. Thank you for choosing to invest some of your time in membership in the Sons of the American Revolution. I have always believed it is vital to understand—and to teach others about—the founding of our nation and the Patriots who made it possible. Take time to participate in meetings. Take time to attend events. Take time to read and study. And most of all, take time to share your knowledge.

One of my recent choices was to visit the South Carolina 250 Revolutionary War Exhibit in the Ruff Building at the State Fair. It's an outstanding display designed to engage scholars of all ages. Incidentally, the Ruff Building—pronounced "roof"—was named for F. Burley Ruff, grandfather of Compatriot Burley Ruff Kennedy. This may also have been the first time Robin and I visited the State Fair without children or grandchildren since 1989.

Another rewarding choice was attending the Francis Marion Symposium in Manning on Friday the 17th and Saturday the 18th. Secretary Carl Epps also attended, and together we enjoyed a day and a half of lectures, presentations, dramas, and demonstrations covering Francis Marion, the Revolution in South Carolina, and the realities of 18th-century life—camp life, daily routines, horses, uniforms, and more. We met numerous authors, artists, and lineage society representatives and shared the experience with several hundred fellow Swamp Fox enthusiasts. I highly recommend this annual event.

Closer to home, we've put the results of our Future Focus Survey and Interest Survey to work by forming thirteen committees, each staffed according to members' interests and experience. If you'd like to serve on one, speak with the committee chairman. The committee chairmen are:

Our Society exists to honor the memory of our Revolutionary War patriot ancestors by promoting patriotism, serving our communities, and educating future generations about the founding principles of our Republic. Each of us carries a sacred responsibility to ensure that their courage and sacrifice are never forgotten.

An essential part of fulfilling that mission is to attend observances and commemorations that pay tribute to the men and women who risked everything to secure the blessings of liberty. Across the Palmetto State, we are blessed with opportunities throughout the year to gather in remembrance—at battlefields, historic churches, and community events—where we can stand shoulder to shoulder with fellow citizens and renew our commitment to the ideals that shaped our nation.

Being a Son of the American Revolution means more than paying dues or wearing a badge of membership. It calls upon each of us to actively serve our chapters and communities—to teach, to inspire, to lead by example, and to pass along the flame of patriotism that burns in our hearts. Our ancestors pledged their lives, fortunes, and sacred honor to the cause of freedom; surely we can pledge our time and energy to preserve their legacy.

Let's take pride in attending ceremonies, supporting youth programs, and helping our Society grow in purpose and visibility. Through our shared efforts, we ensure that the noble deeds of our patriot forebears will continue to echo through the generations—and that all may know we are Americans not merely by birth, but by the enduring spirit and blood of our patriot ancestors.

As your new Vice President of Programs, I'm looking forward to an exciting year filled with engaging presentations on the Revolutionary War and genealogy.

Our next speaker will be local historian Kenneth Robinson, who will discuss German auxiliaries in the American Revolution—a fascinating and often overlooked chapter of our nation's history.

In January, we'll welcome James Hull, whose presentation, Fallen Gamecocks, explores the lives and service of students, alumni, and faculty of South Carolina College and the University of South Carolina who served and died in uniform from the early nineteenth century to the present, with special focus on the Civil War.

These are programs you won't want to miss!

By Registrar, MIKE GILLIS

It was both a pleasure and a privilege to help welcome eight new members to our chapter at the September meeting. That brings our total to nine new compatriots this calendar year—and we're hoping for a few more before year's end!

The Sons of the American Revolution holds very high standards for membership approval, so it's no small achievement to earn acceptance. In recent years, the process has become even more rigorous, requiring each applicant to carefully document every fact on their lineage. It takes real patience and perseverance to see an application through to completion, and our newest members deserve sincere congratulations for their success.

One of the things I enjoy most about serving as Registrar is meeting prospective members and learning about their ancestors—their Patriots—and the sacrifices they made to secure our independence. Each story adds new depth to our shared heritage. I look forward to welcoming many more members in the year ahead as we continue to grow our chapter and honor the legacy of those who made our freedom possible.

Annual Meeting and Nominations

In the SCSSAR, officers serve one-year terms. Members attending the Annual Meeting have the opportunity to nominate candidates from the floor, while the State Nominating Committee presents its slate of recommended candidates for all elected positions. The Bylaws specify which offices are elected and include prior service requirements for the positions of President and Senior Vice President.

The Nominating Committee's recommendations will be announced at the Board of Governors Meeting on January 10, 2026, at Shandon Methodist Church in Columbia. Offices to be filled include:

President, Senior Vice President, five Regional Vice Presidents, Vice President for Chapter Renewal, Vice President for Chapter Formation, Secretary, Recording Secretary, Treasurer, Registrar, Chaplain, Historian, Chancellor, and Genealogist.

The Awards Banquet (Friday evening) and the Annual Meeting (Saturday morning) will continue to be held at the same venue for the next three years — the Hilton Garden Inn Columbia NE on Farrow Road. All members are encouraged to attend and participate in voting for our state officers. Committee chairs and members are appointed positions.

Membership and Dues Coordination

The Senior Vice President also chairs the Membership Committee, currently led by Chairman Clyde Howell. Together, we prepared the dues spreadsheet now being used by all 24 state chapters to record member payments. The State Secretary collects dues from at-large members.

Using the National Society's Blue Database, the Senior Vice President generated the official membership report as of June 23, 2025, along with a reconciliation covering September 1, 2024, through June 23, 2025. Clyde reviewed last year's records to identify discrepancies and determined that a dual-state-member report was also needed.

While the national report includes National Life Members, there is currently no online record for State Life Members. To address this, Clyde Howell and State Secretary Larry Gamble may assign a letter prefix to the state member number to help correctly calculate dues for life members.

Communications and Website Development

The Communications Committee is working on a new SCSSAR website, and updates will be shared soon.

Volunteers for state committees are always appreciated. Your participation strengthens the Society and ensures its continued growth and vitality.

So, how many members should our chapter have? The "Perfect Number" may surprise you.

Every Sons of the American Revolution chapter is unique—shaped by the local community, its history, and the energy of its members. But it's a question worth asking: What is the perfect size for a chapter?

Is it 25 deeply committed compatriots who know one another by name? Or 200 members filling a hall with a color guard in crisp uniforms? The answer, it seems, lies somewhere in between—and in the meaning we each attach to our membership.

What the Data Tells Us

SAR doesn't define an official "ideal" size. Instead, it groups chapters by broad membership ranges for Americanism and President General awards:

- Small: <40 members
- Medium: 41–90 members
- Large: 91–150 members
- Extra Large: >150 members

Why 75 to 100 Members Often Feels "Just Right"

At about 75–100 members, a chapter is big enough to accomplish great things but small enough to keep a sense of fellowship.

At this size:

- There are enough hands to fill officer and committee roles without burning out a few volunteers.
- Meetings and events have good attendance, creating energy and momentum.

- Members can still know one another personally—building the camaraderie that makes SAR more than just a name on a roster.
- Projects such as youth outreach, color guard events, grave markings, or public ceremonies can be organized efficiently.

It's Not Just About Numbers—It's About Engagement

Numbers alone don't tell the whole story. A chapter of 60 members where 40 actively participate is far stronger than a chapter of 200 where only a dozen show up.

“Active” can mean many things:

- Attending chapter meetings
- Participating in events around the state
- Serving on committees
- Recruiting new members
- Presenting JROTC or Eagle Scout awards
- Helping with genealogy and application mentoring
- Supporting our youth contests or patriotic outreach

The heartbeat of the SAR lies in engaged compatriots, not in raw statistics.

The American Revolution

An Overview Review

The Aftermath of the French and Indian War

When the French and Indian War finally ended in 1763, few British subjects on either side of the Atlantic could have foreseen the coming conflicts between Great Britain and its North American colonies. Yet the seeds of those conflicts had already been sown—both during the war and as a result of it.

Known in Europe as the Seven Years' War, this global conflict ended with Great Britain's victory over France and its allies. The triumph, however, came at tremendous cost. By January 1763, Britain's national debt had soared to more than 122 million pounds—an enormous sum for the time—with annual interest payments exceeding 4.4 million pounds. Merely finding the funds to cover the interest consumed the attention of the King and his ministers.

Financial strain was not the only problem confronting British leaders. Maintaining order in North America after the war posed a significant challenge. Although Britain gained control of Canada from France, relations with Native American tribes remained unstable. To preserve peace and protect the frontier, the British decided to maintain a standing army in America—a move that would generate widespread resentment among the colonists.

Further unrest erupted on the western frontier when Pontiac's Rebellion broke out in 1763, prompting the Crown to issue the Proclamation of 1763. This decree forbade settlement west of the Allegheny Mountains, angering land-hungry colonists and speculators such as George Washington.

At the same time, British leaders felt compelled to tighten control over their empire. Laws regulating imperial trade and navigation had long existed, but American merchants were notorious for evading them—often trading with the French even during wartime. From Britain's perspective, it was only fair that the colonists contribute to the costs of their own defense. Moreover, stricter enforcement of trade laws promised much-needed revenue for the Crown. Thus began a series of reforms designed to strengthen imperial authority.

In 1764, Parliament enacted the Sugar Act, designed to raise revenue through a tax on molasses. Although a similar tax had existed since the 1730s, smuggling and lax enforcement had rendered it ineffective. This time, however, enforcement would be strict. The resulting outcry led to organized protests and boycotts of British goods.

The following year, Parliament passed the Stamp Act of 1765, imposing taxes on paper, playing cards, and virtually every legal document in the colonies. Because it affected nearly everyone and extended taxation to goods produced and consumed within the colonies, opposition was immediate and widespread. The Stamp Act crisis marked the first major clash in what would become a long and escalating struggle between Britain and her American colonies.

SC rolls out new SC250 license plates

New SC license plates feature the Moultrie Flag and the phrase “Where the Revolutionary War Was Won.”

October 20, 2025

COLA Today

David Stringer

Bid farewell to South Carolina’s signature blue “While I Breathe, I Hope” license plate. Beginning Jan. 1, the SCDMV will begin issuing a new standard design — the SC250 plate, created to honor the state’s pivotal role in the Revolutionary War.

The new plate features the Moultrie Flag waving below the phrase “Where the Revolutionary War Was Won,” referencing Sgt. William Jasper’s flag-raising during the 1776 Battle of Fort Sullivan. Designed by the South Carolina Revolutionary War Sestercentennial Commission, the update coincides with a state law requiring plate redesigns every 10 years.

Drivers will automatically receive the new plate when renewing registrations starting next year. Because plate numbers are issued in sequence, most motorists will get a new number unless they’ve purchased a personalized tag.
